Preschool Quality Improvement Plan (PQIP)

Our literacy goal in the Preschool Quality Improvement Plan is to extend children's ability to describe experiences and express ideas, which links directly to the Site Improvement Plan (SIP) literacy goal of writing.

As humans, we have an innate desire to express ourselves creatively, and one of the most fundamental ways we do this is through mark making. Mark making refers to the various lines, shapes, and patterns we create on a surface, whether it be paper, canvas, or even a wall. From scribbles to intricate designs, mark making is an important part of our artistic expression.

Mark making can take many forms, from traditional tools such as pens, pencils, and paintbrushes to more unconventional materials like sticks, rocks, and even our fingers. Each tool and material offers its unique texture, thickness, and opacity, allowing us to create a vast range of marks and styles.

Beyond artistic expression, mark making has been proven to have significant benefits for our cognitive development and mental health. Research has shown that the process of creating art, including mark making, can help to reduce stress and anxiety levels, increase self-esteem and confidence, and improve overall well-being. For children, mark making is a vital part of their early learning and development. It helps to develop their fine motor skills, hand-eye coordination, and cognitive abilities, as well as allowing them to explore their creativity and imagination. Encouraging children to experiment with different materials and techniques can provide them with a fun and stimulating learning experience.

In the classroom, mark making can be integrated into a variety of subjects, from art and design to science and math. For example, students can use mark making to illustrate scientific concepts, create mathematical diagrams, or develop their writing skills by using different writing tools and techniques.

Overall, mark making is an essential aspect of our artistic expression and can provide significant benefits for our mental and physical well-being. Whether it be for personal enjoyment or educational purposes, exploring different mark making techniques can be a fun and rewarding experience for all ages.

Enjoy the mark-making photos from the kindy class included in this newsletter.

NAPLAN

This Wednesday NAPLAN begins where all students across Australia in Years 3, 5, 7 and 9 complete four assessments. In order they are, writing, reading, languages of convention and numeracy.

Headlice

We have had a couple of cases reported to the school recently. The most common symptom of head lice is itching on the scalp, neck and ears. This is an allergic reaction to louse bites. When a person has head lice for the first time, itching may not occur for 4 to 6 weeks. Please check your child's hair regularly.

We acknowledge and respect the traditional custodians whose ancestral lands we are meeting upon. We acknowledge the deep feelings of attachment and relationship of Aboriginal people to country.

Children want
the same things
we want.
To laugh, to be challenged, to be entertained,
and delighted.
